Personal Injury

Andrew concentrates on high and medium value claims arising out of road traffic, public liability and employer's liability incidents.

He has a particular interest in fatal accident claims (a subject upon which he lectures regularly). Recent interesting cases include a successfully mediated claim on behalf of two children, one of whom although 19 was a protected party, both of whose parents were killed in a coach crash where the father was the driver and a settled claim where the deceased wife's decision to get back into a car which had suffered engine failure and was positioned on the hard shoulder of the motorway and which was then struck by a lorry raised difficult issues as to contributory negligence.

He is also instructed regularly in brain injury cases with recent instances including a successfully mediated claim in respect of brain injury to a young child from a difficult home where the lump sum award was £1,300,000 with periodical payments of £55,000 increasing to £112,000 prior to indexation, a claim turning upon the impact of an acquired brain injury upon a serving soldier's ability to continue his career in the armed forces and a successful claim where the then 11 year old claimant fell through a skylight when a trespasser on school property.

He appears in a wide range of claims where primary liability or contributory negligence is in dispute in relation to accidents at work, accidents involving motor vehicles and accidents in public places.
